Friction - Wikipedia

Friction is the force resisting the relative motion of solid surfaces, fluid layers, and material elements sliding against each other. There are several types of friction: static friction, kinetic friction, rolling friction, and fluid friction. Friction is a contact force, and it is a vector that acts parallel to the surface of contact. It is a force that opposes the relative motion or the tendency of such motion, between two surfaces in contact. Friction is a force that acts between two surfaces in contact, and it is a force that opposes the relative motion or the tendency of such motion, between two surfaces in contact. Friction is a force that acts between two surfaces in contact, and it is a force that opposes the relative motion or the tendency of such motion, between two surfaces in contact.
